Five years now since the unveiling of the global Sustainable Development Goals (SDGs) by the United Nations and ten years left to the lapse of the period of implementation. Governments around the world are grappling with lots of challenges of implementation of SDGs through local mechanisms.

A policy gaps analysis in 2018 assessed Kenya's preparedness to implement the 2030 Agenda by elaborating how SDGs targets align with the national planning frameworks. It recommended the enhancement of the national policy framework, which informed the need to review the existing and the development of new policies.
